Title of Activity: We Need to Hire a Leader

GRADE

Estimated Time: 1–2 days

OBJECTIVE(S) Students will research criteria for hiring a “leader” from the perspective of an employer. Students compare and contrast their findings by evaluating whether they possess the attributes of a leader.	COMMENCEMENT STANDARDS
DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Students are presented with a role-play situation in which the management of a successful design organization needs to hire a “team leader” to see a crucial project through to completion. Additionally, the potential team leader will be required to assist the organization in maintaining positive growth in the 21st century. Students compile a list of attributes that would be critical for the team leader position. Students work in teams to create a job description for the team leader position. The teacher discusses the components of a job description and provides examples of existing job descriptions to use as models. The criteria for the job description must be based on the identified list of attributes. Upon completion of the job descriptions, students identify how to develop skills to fit the criteria in the job description. Students make a brief (two- to three-minute) verbal presentation of their findings. 	Career Development (1)

Essential Question(s): How do I know whether I am prepared for lifelong learning?

Title of Activity: A Colleague in Need

GRADE
9	10	11	12

Estimated Time: 2–3 days

OBJECTIVE(S)	COMMENCEMENT STANDARDS
Students will examine the important role that lifelong learning plays in all career opportunities by identifying and offering crucial advice.
DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Students participate in a lecture/discussion of lifelong learning and the crucial role it plays in career development. Students are presented with the following points: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> A never-ending quest for increased knowledge, education, understanding, and self-improvement is the foundation for lifelong learning. Committing to lifelong learning begins with the appropriate state of mind. Being humble, open-minded, and never satisfied are positive traits of the lifelong learner. Teacher gives the students the following role-play scenario: Juanita works in a growing and successful start-up company, and she received a letter from a colleague. The colleague said that he recently received notification that he was denied a promotion because he was not open to new ideas and challenges. The colleague admits that he has “missed out on” several key business trends that have recently developed and that he is not current and up-to-date on the latest version of software that the company uses extensively. The colleague asks Juanita for advice on what to do. Students prepare a formal business letter to their colleague, offering advice and encouragement, detailing important steps to learning on the job and achieving lifelong learning. To reinforce activity, students may be directed to read at least one biography or autobiography about someone they feel exemplifies lifelong learning. 	Career Development (1) 1. OBJECTIVE(S)	COMMENCEMENT STANDARDS
The student will develop a logical plan of action to handle a specific situation.
DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Students are presented with the following situation: Your father works for a large telecommunications firm that wishes to develop a new market in Kenya, Brazil, or China. The position for your father will double his salary, allow him to become the vice president of this division of the company, and be on the cutting edge of the telecommunications world in Africa, South America, or Asia. The company will move the family and requests that all family members stay in the country for a minimum of two years. In Kenya, the company will find appropriate housing for the family, and you will be living in the capital of Nairobi. In Brazil, you will be housed in San Paolo, and you will attend the public schools there. In China, you will live in Beijing, and the company will provide housing in a new subdivision. Your family will have to pay for private school for you, your brother, and sister. Students use the Internet to find the locations and obtain factual information about each country. Students investigate language, schools, colleges, population, weather, customs, and other information that will help in making a recommendation. Students prepare presentations to their families on their findings. Their choices are prioritized, information provided about each location, and reasons for choosing one location over the other two are explained. Students include information on the positive and negative effects that each location might have on the student. Presentations should be made to a panel representing their parents, brother, and sister. The panel should be prepared to ask questions, as would happen if they were actually making this important decision. Students discuss and identify specific needs to adapt to the new country. Students develop a plan of adjustment to prepare themselves for the country they selected. Estimated Time: 1–2 days

OBJECTIVE(S)	COMMENCEMENT STANDARDS
Students will explore the role of change in both personal and professional aspects of life.
DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Teacher explains that students will examine the turbulent emotions faced by a worker whose company is in the process of a rapid and aggressive expansion. Students are presented with the situation of a worker who has come home to his family with the following information: “My company is expanding. Instead of dealing with projects pretty much by myself, I now have to create and manage a department of 20 people. I’ve also learned that a new computer system with up-to-date videoconferencing will soon be implemented. In addition, we will be moving aggressively into global markets and e-commerce! I may have to travel to far-off countries! After this, nothing will ever be the same. How do I know if I am up to the challenge?” Students participate in a classroom discussion on the situation, assessing its reality potential and the major issues within the situation. Students identify both the positive and negative aspects of change as reflected in the situation. Students are presented with the fact that change encompasses all aspects of life and careers, and that it affects lives almost daily. Students brainstorm ways that change impacts careers and daily lives. Teacher presents a brief lecture on change, explaining that accepting change is a crucial life skill. Additionally, the teacher explains that developing a strong, positive emotional/mental outlook will greatly ease the stress that often accompanies change. Students research the subject of change, and report back to class the next day with their findings. Students are asked to identify one career and identify how careers and deadlines are related to that specific career. Students are directed to gather and compile information from numerous sources (e.g., Internet, library, and media center) to assist in the preparation of the research paper, while following guidelines they will help to create on efficiency. Prior to beginning their research, students will be asked to contribute to a classroom list, detailing their interpretation of "efficiency" (thesauruses and dictionaries may be used) and discussing why it is important when accessing information. Students are then asked why accessing information efficiently is required for success in making schedules and meeting critical deadlines at work. The students then contribute to a classroom list detailing skills they believe are essential for efficient information access. Title of Activity: It Starts with a Handshake

GRADE
9	10	11	12

Estimated Time: 2–3 class periods

OBJECTIVE(S)	COMMENCEMENT STANDARDS
Students will gain valuable knowledge of interpersonal skills, business dress, and personal grooming by examining their importance in modern careers.
DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Students are informed that beginning with the “the interview,” interpersonal skills, business dress, and personal grooming are crucial aspects in successfully acquiring and keeping jobs. Students are presented with the following points: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> A proper handshake combined with a smile sets the stage for social and business interactions. Kindness and generosity are traits that can be improved and developed on a continual basis. Civility is always better than conflict. Conveying a willingness to assist is essential in every occupation. Personal hygiene and grooming must be impeccable and proper manners and etiquette are worth their weight in gold. Proper business dress must begin with apparel that is clean and neat, and that reflects their chosen career. Proper vocabulary and pronunciation must be combined with good grammar and taste. Courtesy is a precious commodity. Students discuss how each point relates to personal success in business. They are also asked to identify any points with which they disagree—and explain why. Students identify any other points they believe are critical aspects of interpersonal skills, business dress, and personal grooming. Upon completion of the discussion, students agree upon a final set of critical points. Each student lists all points in a notebook for future reference. One day is identified as “Business Day.” Each student identifies a preferred career and dresses in appropriate business dress. Additionally, students follow all the agreed-upon points (e.g., shaking hands when meeting others, being courteous, using proper grammar). In class, students discuss their feelings and reactions to Business Day and comment on whether there was a change in how others reacted to them. 	Career Development (1) 1. DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITY
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Teacher provides an introduction regarding the importance of properly greeting and introducing people in a business environment. Established rules regarding introductions (e.g., “stand for introductions, make good eye contact, base introductions on rank rather than gender) are presented to the class. Rules can be posted in the room for easy reference (and constant reminders). Class discusses the reasons for the different rules, and discusses if social introductions are different from business introductions. Teacher and students create a rubric addressing the rules for business introductions. Teacher presents the class with different role-play situations in which students make various business introductions. (The role-play scenarios should address the range of introduction possibilities.) Students are assigned various roles in role-play situations, and they role-play their assignments. Students are assigned to critique (in a positive, helpful manner) other students as they make the assigned introductions. Students are also given an opportunity to self-evaluate. All students are given an opportunity to repeat their introductions so that they can improve their technique. Class discusses the activity. As a study on the impact of proper introductions, the class is asked to use the “rules for introductions” for one week in all situations in which they meet and introduce other people. At the end of one week, the class discusses any reactions to the introductions—both from others and themselves.

How Will Personal Reflection Aid in the Development and Implementation of My Career Goals?

COMMENCEMENT SAMPLE ACTIVITY

Essential Question(s): How will personal reflection aid in the development and implementation of my career goals?

Title of Activity: A Look in the Mirror

GRADE
9	10	11	12

Estimated Time: 1–2 class periods

OBJECTIVE(S) Students will gain valuable knowledge in the important role that personal reflection plays in the development and implementation of career goals.	COMMENCEMENT STANDARDS
DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Teacher informs students that personal reflection is crucial in all successful career endeavors and gives examples. Students are informed that a person must know “who they are” and what interests, skills, and talents they possess in order to meet career goals. Students are presented with the following statement: “If I always look in the mirror and am not afraid to contemplate, to seek answers, and to be open to new ideas, I will be wiser and more educated, thus making me more successful in my career.” Students discuss the statement and explain what it means. Then, they identify if they agree or disagree, providing rationale for their answers. After discussion, students are directed to answer the following questions in brief essay format: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> “Who am I really (e.g., son/daughter, sister/brother, friend, student, worker)?” “What do I stand for?” “What is important to me?” “What kind of a citizen am I now, and what kind of citizen do I want to be in adulthood?” “How are my career goals impacted by my beliefs and actions?” Upon completion of essay, students participate in an informal classroom discussion to reinforce learning. Estimated Time: 1–2 weeks

Students will reflect on the changes that have taken place with specific jobs in the local area or state over a period of years. Students will determine whether they want to secure a job with some history within the area or seek a different type of employment.
DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITY <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Students will design a timeline of job or career changes in a specific area over 50 to 100 years. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Using logic program (e.g., Inspiration), prepare a timeline; or draw a timeline, using a paint program or the draw tool on the word processor. ○ Determine whether to use 5-, 10-, or 20-year intervals, including two intervals beyond the present year. ○ Reflect changes in jobs or careers on the timeline. • Students write an article for each time period to reflect the changes in jobs, occupations, or particular fields. Students will research things that happened close to the day they were born that had an impact on careers, job situation, or career changes. • Students compare their findings with changes in the jobs their family members (e.g., parents, aunts/uncles, grandparents, great-grandparents) have held. Students predict the direction their careers will take. • Students use this information to describe a pattern of change in relation to tools, the way work is done, location of work, education requirements, and predictions for the future based upon the past. • Students develop a home page to portray the timeline and topic. • Class reviews all timelines that were developed. Students draw a conclusion for each 5- to 10-year period as to what caused the changes and what indicators will predict the changes in the future. From these, the students write descriptions of what their future jobs will be like, what kind of education they will need, what the demand will be for the job, and what the potential earnings are for this occupation based on the job requirements and salary structure. 	Career Development (1) 1.
